

Lauren Rosa Miller

STORYTELLER ♦ LEGACY ARCHITECT ♦ PRINCIPAL, IRL ADVISORS

"Family is the first institution. It predates government, religion, commerce — everything. And nobody is telling those stories at the scale they deserve."

THE STORY

Lauren Miller's work began where all legacy work begins — in the room. Walking alongside her father through his illness, she witnessed firsthand what families carry in those moments: the stories that almost don't survive, the history held in one person's memory, the institutional knowledge no one ever thought to write down.

What she stepped into was not just grief — it was generational transfer in real time. Her father had built something historic, rooted in nearly 150 years of family enterprise. Lauren became the second generation — catching a living legacy mid-transition and carrying it forward while the business was still running. That experience made her obsessed with one question: what do families risk losing when no one is paying attention?
